Lilian,

For the reasons outlined in our September 10, 2021 letter and those you mention below, we confirm that Caddo withdraws its infringement allegations regarding the redesigned website for the '880 and '127 patents.

Subject: RE: Caddo v. Microchip - Plaintiffs Final Infringement Contentions

Veronica,

Thank you for the letter last Friday and today's call regarding Caddo's infringement contentions.

As discussed on the call, we're asking Caddo to confirm in writing that it is withdrawing its infringement allegations regarding the redesigned website for the '880 and '127 patents. All of the asserted independent claims for those two patents recite displaying items "upon provisional selection" of an active link. The specification makes clear that "provisional selection" is synonymous with "rolling over." See '127 Patent, 4:46-50 ("The user browses by 'rolling-over' (provisionally selecting) an element with a pointing device..."). Caddo appears to make identical DOE arguments for both the "provisional selection" and "rolling over" limitations. Compare, e.g., FIC Ex. E at 18-19 with id. at 29. Thus, given that Caddo withdrew "its DoE infringement allegations for the 'roll[ed/ing] over' limitations" (9/10/2021 Letter at 7), please confirm it is also withdrawing the DOE allegations for the "provisional selection" limitations.

We will follow up separately by letter regarding the other issue discussed today, which relates to the '301 and '836 patents.

Best,
Lillian
